

Robert B. Taylor Collection

1886-1972

99 textual records, 29 photographs, 10 artifacts, 5 albums / 3 linear feet / 4 boxes

The Robert B. Taylor collection provides invaluable information on Corona's earliest days and its principal founder, Robert B. Taylor. Taylor was born in Millbrook, Wayne County, Ohio on October 26, 1849. Though he attempted to join the army as a flag bearer in the Civil War, he was rejected. Instead, he went to college to become a teacher. After teaching for 6 months, Taylor bought his father's store in Indiana and set about becoming a merchant. He also began buying land in other states and selling off subdivisions. In 1873, he married Emma S. Mason. Several years later in 1886, he and Emma moved to California at the urging of his father, who lived in Anaheim. Immediately, Taylor purchased 105 acres in Anaheim and sold it one year later at a profit. Soon after viewing the property the Yorbas had put up for sale near Riverside, he began making plans to begin the community of South Riverside. He went to Iowa to gain support for his venture. In 1886, Taylor purchased 12,000 acres of the Yorba Ranch property south of Riverside with partners George L. Joy, A.S. Garretson, Samuel Merrill, and H. Clay Kellogg. Together, they incorporated a company and were known as the South Riverside Land and Water Company. Emma Mason Taylor and R.B. Taylor had three children: Emma Josephine Taylor (known as "Ocie") in 1877, James DuVergne Taylor (known as "Verne") in 1906 and Harry Garfield Taylor. He later moved to Los Angeles with Emma, but his children lived in Corona most of their lives and the entire family are buried in the local Sunnyslope cemetery. R.B. Taylor died at 1251 W. 54th St, Los Angeles on August 30th, 1940 of pneumonia. See attached BIOGRAPHY for more information.

This collection consists of autobiographical sketches and a history of early Corona by Taylor himself, a family bible, several scrapbooks/photo albums, various newspaper clippings and wedding announcements. In addition, several letters and photos that evidence Taylor's connection to the White House; 2 letters from Vice President Thomas Marshall and a photo with President William Henry Harrison in Corona. Additional items include Taylor's South American mining interests, business ventures in Los Angeles, and articles written and published by the Garretson family. The collection has little information of R. B. Taylor after 1900 to his death in 1940 other than his contributions to recounting early Corona history for civic anniversary events. The Songer collection (M001) should be examined in conjunction with the Taylor collection, as it contains more information about the R. B. Taylor family and the founders of Corona. Some of the items in the collection have been photographed or scanned and are available to view via the Corona Public Library website in our online digital database, Corona Heritage Online.

The collection came to the library without a particular order and it as been arranged into time frames of major interest and subdivided into types of materials.
